

Being

the Beloved

Question12 on the Nature of Consciousness
Levels of Experiencing - Related to Fear
STATEMENT	ANSWER	LEVEL* OF TRUTH
Without knowing exactly what a particular experience is, there is so much fear that there is avoidance through Suicide	yes	40
There is so much fear surrounding a particular experience that the person is unable to do anything (frozen, like a rabbit on the road)	yes	100
There is much anger at the World/God/Consciousness that this person would have to experience something so dreaded	yes	150
Once the person can begin to do for themselves what is needed, there is considerable pride in whatever gets done	yes	190
Once over overt fear and anger, the person accomplishes a minimum of what needs to be done. Wishes they could have done more	yes	200
The person sees what needs to be done, grumbles, accepts the need to experience it and does what they can	yes	320
The person does what they can and turns to the nearest person they approve of to be of assistance to them	yes	400
The person does what they can and turns to help the nearest person	yes	500
This person accepts, without reservation, the experience Consciousness offers and immediately turns to help others	yes	600
This person suspects that whatever they do, one way or another, may not specifically help themselves or others, but they do it anyway	yes	800
This person knows that the best experience is to do whatever is put in front of them to do, without reservations	yes	840
This person sees the danger as another form of Consciousness	yes	900
This person sees the danger as a life lesson from Consciousness	yes	950

* Ascending levels of Consciousness

LOC = 1000 recalibrated